For as long as anyone can remember, children have been waking up to find eggs on Easter morning. Most eggs are now chocolate but they used to be hen or duck eggs, painted with bright, beautiful patterns.

No matter what kind of egg, they are all delivered by... the Easter Bunny. She spends all year getting ready for this egg-tastic morning. This is the story of how one year, the Easter Bunny had to learn to trust others to help her save Easter.

The first daffodils had just started to appear when the Easter Bunny started to get ready. She made her plan, working out just how long they would take to paint. She knew she had to get started straight away!

Just as she had finished writing her plans, an envelope was slipped under the door to her workshop. She opened it quickly and read the note inside.

Dear Easter Bunny,

We are exhausted and need a break. We are heading off on holiday and will see you in the summer.

Have an eggcellent
Easter!

Love,

The Chickens

This was a disaster! Without the chickens, there would be no eggs. No eggs meant no Easter egg hunts and no Easter egg hunts meant lots of unhappy children. The day would be ruined!

Now the Easter Bunny wasn't the kind of bunny to panic, so she sent letters to her friends, who she was sure would help.

The next day, her luck still didn't improve. The rabbits, who had helped to make her paintbrushes using the fur from their coats, had a terrible case of bunny measles. They were all wrapped up tight in bed, drinking camomile tea and eating carrot soup.

Even the moles, who dug the tunnels she used to deliver her eggs, were nowhere to be found.

The Easter Bunny had no idea what she was going to do. She had no eggs, no brushes and no way to deliver any eggs even if she did manage to make them!

There would be no Easter this year, she thought to herself and a large tear ran slowly down her furry cheek.

A loud knock made her jump and she made her way to the door. When she opened it, she couldn't believe her eyes!

Outside, were all the animals she had been warned about – sly foxes, thieving badgers and the gossiping geese!

“Can we come in?” said one of the foxes gently.

“No! Of course you can’t!” shouted the Easter Bunny, “Leave me alone!”

“But we heard you needed help,” honked one of the geese.

“You want to help me?” the Easter Bunny said, puzzled.

“Yes. We want to save Easter,” said the fox.

“Please don’t think that all foxes are sly and mean. Trust me and I can help you.”

“We know that you need eggs because the chickens have gone away. Just give us a chance,” squawked the geese.

“Our paws are yours. We are ready to dig!” smiled the badgers.

The Easter Bunny had heard stories about what these animals could be like and she didn't believe that they were telling the truth.

But she thought that perhaps she should give them a chance. After all, she didn't have a chance of saving Easter by herself.

She took a deep breath and invited them all in.

Much to the Easter Bunny's surprise, the animals went straight to work. The geese laid eggs, morning, noon and night, until there were enough eggs for every child to have one.

The foxes used hairs from their bushy tails to make the finest brushes in the land for the Easter Bunny.

As soon as they had finished the brushes, they worked with the badgers to dig all of the tunnels the Easter Bunny needed.

With the eggs laid and the tunnels dug, everyone began to paint.

Together, they painted some of the most beautiful patterns the Easter Bunny had ever seen!

When they were finished, the Easter Bunny stood back to admire their work.

She let out a satisfied sigh. Her new friends had done it. They had saved Easter!

As Easter morning arrived, the eggs were collected together and the Easter Bunny delivered them to all the boys and girls, who were delighted.

The chickens returned, just like they said they would, but the Easter Bunny knew that if they ever needed a break again, she had some new, unlikely friends who she could rely on.

The background features a large tree with a brown trunk and green foliage. A bookshelf is built into the tree on the right, containing various books. In the foreground, there are three orange cylindrical containers labeled 'MAPS' filled with rolled-up maps, and several paint cans in various colors (yellow, pink, blue, green).

The lead-up to Easter is always a busy time for the Easter Bunny!

“She spends all year getting ready for this egg-tastic morning.”

But when things don't quite go to plan, the Easter Bunny discovers that help can come from the most unlikely of places. Will she be able to save Easter with the help of some new friends?
